The board of ethics is an independent, citizen-appointed board that works to ensure honesty, openness and integrity in city government by enforcing the city's ethical standards of conduct. Nominees to the board undergo an extensive background check.

"Though ethics have always been a crucial part of good business, there is a renewed interest in the topic in recent years," says Sam A. Williams, president of the Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. "And having a strong ethics board is part of an important system of checks and balances for the city of Atlanta. That's why we felt it important to nominate a stand-up guy like Charlie Crawford for the board."
